2018 Rental Housing Demolition & Conversion

Information and Instructions for Applications to Demolish or Convert Rental Housing

Application Purpose

The City of Toronto has a by-law regulating rental housing demolition and conversion – Municipal Code Chapter 667, Residential Rental Property Demolition and Conversion Control. It requires the owner of residential rental property (“rental housing”) considering a demolition or conversion, that is subject to the provisions of the by-law, to obtain a permit from the City of Toronto. This permit is in addition to any other permits or approvals as required under the Building Code Act, 1992, the Planning Act, the City of Toronto Act, 2006 or other City of Toronto by-law.

A proposal is subject to the by-law if it involves six or more existing dwelling units, any of which are rental units, and the proposal is to:

- Demolish all or part of a building, including interior renovations/alterations when it results in a change to the number or bedroom type of existing rental units.
- Convert from existing rental housing use to non-rental purposes, for example, changing to non-residential such as offices; changing self-contained rental dwelling units to something else such as a care home with central services or to individual rooms; changing the rental status of the housing to freehold ownership, condominium, co-ownership or life lease forms of ownership; severing a rental property such that the number of rental units remaining on any severed or retained parcel drops below six units.

A proposal does not require a permit under the by-law if it involves:

- Five or fewer existing dwelling units, or that involves six or more existing dwelling units but none are rental units
- Properties that are condominium-registered or life-lease properties
- Demolition activity on a rental property where the portion affected contains no residential units, for example, demolishing retail space or ancillary space such as underground parking, indoor amenity or property management facilities
- Additions to a rental property that do not directly affect existing units
- Severing rental properties where each severed parcel contains 6 or more rental units or where a severed parcel contained no existing dwelling units

For a more complete understanding of the by-law and for when a permit is required, please consult Chapter 667 of the Municipal Code available on-line at www.toronto.ca/legdocs/municode/index.htm, or contact the Community Policy Unit in City Planning at 416-392-7863.

Pre-Application Consultation

If your proposal has met the criteria in the Declaration of Use and Screening Form for possible application of the City’s by-law on Rental Housing Demolition and Conversion, contact the Community Policy Unit in City Planning at 416-392-7863 to schedule a pre-application consultation meeting.

How to Apply

Submit a completed “Rental Housing Demolition and Conversion Application” by mail or in person directly to the applicable district Customer Service Office as indicated on page 1 of the Application form, and attach all required submissions. If an approval is obtained, and if your proposal requires a permit under Section 8 or 10 of the Building Code Act, 1992, a separate application must be made to Toronto Building. If you have applied or intend to apply for a related planning application, submit both the planning application and Rental Housing Demolition and Conversion Application at the same time so that they are reviewed concurrently.

- e. Completed Data Summary sheet (page 3) indicating the total number of existing rental units by rent category. If the proposal affects only a portion of the existing rental units, then a second data sheet should also be completed providing the same information but for only the affected rental units.

If there's a related planning application and a housing issues report is required to satisfy the planning application requirements, a single report may be submitted as long as all requirements for both applications are included.
